

Wendy Armstrong is the Associate Director of CASB's Legal Services Program. Ms. Armstrong provides legal representation to CASB's LSP clients, with particular emphasis on special education, anti-discrimination and constitutional issues. She also consults with local board members on a wide range of education law issues.

Prior to joining CASB, Ms. Armstrong worked in private law practices for 14 years, 9 of those devoted exclusively to representing local and state education agencies in special education and discrimination cases. She litigated such cases at all levels of state and federal administrative, trial and appellate tribunals, including arguing a number of special education cases before the United States Courts of Appeals. She was also a frequent presenter in education law at local and state conferences and training seminars.

Ms. Armstrong grew up around the world, graduating from high school in New Delhi, India, before matriculating at the University of Virginia. After receiving her B.A. from U.Va., she went on to receive her J.D. from Wake Forest University School of Law.

In her spare time, Ms. Armstrong enjoys traveling, skiing, surfing, bike riding, reading, cooking and spending time with her family and friends.
