- Consider how nontraditional educational spaces can serve as community anchors.
- Gain actionable ideas or frameworks for initiating or strengthening school-community partnerships.
- Develop understanding of how school districts can become catalysts for community building and resilience.

Littleton Public Schools in 2021

- The district was experiencing declining enrollment.
- LPS passed a Bond in 2018
  - The Bond allowed the district to strategically replace its aging facilities in a way that also addressed transportation and school size challenges.

Decision Making during Declining Enrollment

- LPS Board of Education decided to consolidate East Elementary School and Ralph Moody Elementary School on the Ralph Moody property and create a new elementary school.
- LPS Board of Education committed to developing a community center in the East Elementary Campus.
  - The Center needed to be self-sustaining without any new budget commitment.
  - The Center would be designed to strengthen the assets and support the needs of the North Littleton Community.

Community Engagement Process

- LPS hired a community partner, Civic Innovation Lab, to guide community engagement strategies, develop a shared decision-making process, and facilitate the implementation of the decision-making process to determine what services to include in the East Community Center
- Over a series of four Community Meetings, various and diverse stakeholders co-created a shared vision and plan for the East Community Center that reflected and represented the North Littleton community.
- The activities implemented ensured all voices were heard and incorporated democratic processes, consensus-building, and cross-experiential collaboration.

- Anchor tenants and partnerships build sustainability and support.
- Thoughtful consideration for how a Community Center can operate like a school and how it cannot is critical - this requires intentional planning.
- Need for a continual development process as partners come and go in order to provide consistency and sustainability.
